

Itinerary

July 6, 2018: I'm in Nicosia, Cyprus, the last wall divided Capitol in the world. A few days ago, I went walking around the Greek side of the wall and ran into these guys sitting in front of a barrel & barb wire barricade. We talked for about half an hour. One guy went to school in Norfolk, almost making it to West Virginia once trying to escape a hurricane. The elder man (73 years old) complained the idiot Trump was taking all the air out of his complaints about the local idiot leaders. People were telling him to quit complaining since the smartest people on earth elected someone worse than their leaders.

Today I am flying to Beirut for a week and then to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia for another week. Then I head south to Zanzibar, Tanzania and on to South Africa, Johannesburg, Cape Town.

If time permits, I may visit Namibia, Mozambique and Madagascar before returning to Vancouver in September. Take care, dj
